ONE-SHOT FRAME

doesplaydice.com

Everything a Narrator needs for one session, on one page. Fill in what you know; improvise the rest.

THE PREMISE, IN ONE SENTENCE

What is happening, and why does the party care in the first two minutes?

DICE YOU HAND OUT

Three of the five. Smaller = less experienced.

OPENING SCENE

What do they see, hear and smell? End on a question they have to answer.

THE OBSTACLE, AND THREE WAYS PAST IT

One route per skill. If you can only think of one route, the obstacle isn't finished. Set each difficulty before anyone rolls.

APPROACH	SKILL	NARRATOR ROLLS
	Body
	Mind
	Soul

THE COMPLICATION

What changes once they commit to a plan?

HOW IT ENDS

What tells everyone the story is over?

NAMES TO HAVE READY

Five is plenty. You will need one you didn't plan for.

AFTER THE SESSION — WHAT ACTUALLY HAPPENED

The most valuable half of the page. What confused people, what landed, what you had to explain twice, what you'd cut. Photograph this before you throw it away.

Roll only when failing would be interesting. If they want to open an unlocked door, just tell them what's inside.
On a tie, both sides get something. They get through — and something it cost them.
